

Municipality and Community Celebrate Small Business Week

Oct. 23, 2026

It's Small Business Week in Nova Scotia!

Elected officials, municipal staff, community partners and representatives of local businesses met in Council Chambers for an evening of celebration, networking, and connection Oct. 21. The "Celebrating Small Business in Kings" event was hosted by the Municipality in partnership with CBDC Hants-Kings.

Deputy Mayor Everett MacPherson highlighted the resilience of the business community in Kings County in a fast-changing world.

"Small Business Week is an opportunity not only to recognize the entrepreneurs and small businesses that help our communities thrive, but also to celebrate their accomplishments in an increasingly fast-changing environment," he said.

"Over the past few years, businesses have been asked to adapt to changing technologies, changing customer expectations, workforce challenges, and economic uncertainty... The businesses gathered here tonight have continued to show resilience, creativity, and determination in the face of that change."

MacPherson encouraged the business representatives and support workers in attendance to celebrate their accomplishments and reflect on how their hard work, perseverance and innovation directly contribute to the well-being of their communities.

"One of the things that makes Kings County special is the strength and diversity of our local business community," he said, recognizing the employees, families and support organizations that help local businesses grow.

"Whether you're operating a long-established business or just getting started, you are helping shape the future of Kings County."
